RIVER RECEDING; THREE-INCH DROP SINCE LAST NIGHT

Most of the Wharves Here Are Still Covered With Water

MILFORD SPAN GOES

Center Span of New Bridge
Swept Away By River

Water in the Delaware River here at Bristol is receding. At high water last night the tide was four inches higher than it was at high water yesterday morning. This morning the tide was three inches lower than it was at high tide last night.

Many of the wharves here are still underwater and boat owners are keeping careful watch over their craft. Many boats have broken loose but have been recovered.

It is the opinion of rivermen that the deepened channel here has prevented more serious flood conditions. The channel was deepened from 12 to 20 feet from Trenton to Philadelphia. The channel is 100 feet wide while the curves are 200 feet wide. Four million cubic yards of sand were dug from the river and this space has carried a tremendous amount of water and the widening of the curves has prevented any great resistance to the outflowing water, is the opinion of Clarence W. Winter, who is an enthusiastic boatman and conversant with river conditions.

At Milford, three miles from Frenchtown, 15 men narrowly escaped death when the centre span of a new bridge, now under construction, was swept away.

The men, working below the structure, heard an ominous crackle as a large tree was swept against the structure.

The men raced along the footboards to shore just as the heavy section crashed into the angry waters.

Other workmen, perched on the upper section of the span, believed that their fellow workmen had been killed outright by the crash. When their shouts brought forth no response they summoned aid from Frenchtown.

The wail of a siren brought firemen, policemen and other volunteers to the scene. Scores of men with strong lights roared about on the turbulent water but could find no trace of the men.

An hour later when hope was being abandoned the men were discovered in the foothills. Exhausted from their wild sprint and badly frightened by the narrow escape, the men said they were unable to get back to the scene.

In Morrisville, the family of James Farrell, of Central avenue, on the Island, was forced to move to the home of neighbors at 4 o'clock yesterday morning.

Farrell and his wife and one child stayed awake all night, apprehensively watching the rise of the water. When it filled the cellar and rose to the first floor.

Steam Roller Falls In Creek; Stands on End

LANGHORNE, Aug. 26—A steam roller weighing 15 tons took a nose dive when the bank of the Neshaminy Creek gave way at the bridge where the new super-highway is being built.

The bank of the creek gave way and the roller stood on end with parts of the two rollers just barely showing. For a time workmen thought someone had stolen the roller.

Edgely Woman Injured As Truck and Auto Collide

Mrs. Minnie Ferraro, Edgely, gained brush burns of the right knee and right elbow, and suffered severely from shock when the automobile operated by her husband, Samuel Ferraro, was struck by a passing truck at the highway and Wilson avenue this morning at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Ferraro's small daughter suffered also from shock, while the driver was unhurt. The woman was treated at Harriman Hospital.

The accident is said to have occurred east on the highway, and was hit by a passing truck which it is claimed was not stopped by the driver. The Ferraro machine was considerably damaged, and the windshield broken.

Michael J. Ennis Dies At His Home in Bensalem Twp.

Michael J. Ennis, who during his entire lifetime made his home in this section of Bucks county, died at his Bensalem township home last evening.

Survivors include three sisters and a brother: Mrs. Ellen Hogan, Philadelphia; the Misses Margaret and Elizabeth Ennis, and Thomas Ennis, Bensalem township. The deceased was the son of the late Michael and Mary Ennis.

Funeral will be held Tuesday at 8.30 a. m., from the Ennis home, with solemn high requiem mass at 10 o'clock in St. Charles' R. C. Church, Cornwells Heights. Interment will be made in St. Dominick's Cemetery.

In Legal Wife Swap

Major Stuart C. MacDonald (top as West Point cadet) and Captain William B. Bradford, U. S. Army officer who legally swapped wives recently. The ladies calmly proceeded to Bentonville, Ark., where they obtained divorces, following which each married the other's former husband. MacDonald is stationed at Berwick, Pa., and Bradford at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

TREK BACK TO SCHOOL TO BEGIN IN STATE

Students Prepare to Return in 2,587 Districts In Pennsylvania

IS AN IMPORTANT YEAR

HARRISBURG, Aug. 26—(INS)—"School days, school days, good old golden —" echoes over the length and breadth of Pennsylvania as students in the state's 2,587 districts prepare to return for instructions in reading, 'ritin' and 'rithmetic.

The trek back to the classroom begins in this state late this month. All schools will have reopened early in September.

Because of reduced appropriations and the inability of some districts to collect taxes, this year is expected to be most important in public education.

To offset this, however, the state department of public instruction has done much to aid distressed school districts and educational institutions in general. Among the contributions of the department during the summer months was a series of new courses of study in science and social studies.

One division of the science course will be taught in grades from one to six. It will mark the first time in many years that elementary schools of Pennsylvania have had science as a regular part of their curriculum.

New books and supplies have been distributed throughout the state during recent weeks.

Several districts, able to take advantage of the low construction, completed new buildings during the summer months. Others used whatever financial resources available for the repair and remodeling of existing structures.

Enrollment in the State's continuation schools is expected to increase considerably as a result of the re-employment campaign being carried out by the NRA. This will cause a readjustment of the school organization in many districts this fall. In order that the change may be properly handled, Dr. James B. Rule, superintendent of the department of public instruction, has offered suggestions to county and district superintendents.

Many girls, employed in domestic service, will have to be given instruction in continuation school for eight hours a week.

Persons ranging in age from 14 to 16 years are expected to return to the classroom in numbers. They should be placed in the class best adapted to their needs, Dr. Rule believes, and urged to continue after they reach the age of 16.

The most difficult group to handle will be those who, because of unemployment, return to school only with the intention of remaining until they are 16 years old. If the school is to serve the particular needs of this body, Dr. Rule suggests the drafting of a curriculum to enable the students to profit fully by their attendance on a full-time basis.

HARRISBURG — (INS) — Union County turned out industrial products valued at $1,482,800 during 1932, as compared with $2,456,900 in 1931, a survey made by Philip H. Dewey, secretary of internal affairs, showed.

BABY CUTS HEAD

Striking her head on the rear of a baby carriage when she fell last night, little Mary Schafie, 822 Jefferson avenue, suffered a contused laceration of the forehead. Three stitches were taken in the cut at Harriman Hospital.

RECOVERING FROM STORM

New York, Aug. 26—Basking in sunshine for the first time in a week, the Eastern seaboard today set about bringing order to the destruction wreaked by one of the most disastrous storms of the year.

With the death toll from the storm set at 49 and property damage in the millions, most of the coastal region emerged from the storm's path and started a final check-up on damages and start re-habilitation work.

The tempest swung well into Canadian territory this morning, its force waning.

The death list, with additional casualties threatened from impending floods in Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey, was set at Pennsylvania, 14; New York, 2; New Jersey, 10; Delaware, 2; Virginia, 11, and Maryland, 10.

The Schuylkill and Delaware Rivers in Pennsylvania were still at high marks with wide areas already under water.

FUTILE EFFORT AT RESCUE

Malaga, N. J., Aug. 26—Despite the futile effort of a companion who nearly drowned in an attempt at rescue, 15-year old Gerald Richardson, motherless son of James Richardson, Vine-land, N. J., lay dead today. The boy lost his life late yesterday when he ventured too far out into Malaga Lake and was caught up by the rushing current of the Malaga River.

KILLS FATHER-IN-LAW

Phila., Aug. 26—James E. Reardon, 30, an unemployed electrical engineer, was in jail today charged, by his own admission, with the slaying of his father-in-law, a man whose death police had attributed to an accidental fall down a flight of stairs. The dead man was Thomas Mulligan, 71, who lived with Reardon and his wife, Mulligan's daughter.

To Explain NRA Affect On Employment Certificates

Bucks County school authorities, employers and others interested have been invited to attend a meeting on Thursday, August 31, 9.30 a. m., daylight saving time, at the Norristown City School Administration Building.

Mr. Shambach, director of the Child Accounting Bureau, and Mr. Cressman, assistant director of Vocational Education, will be present to answer questions concerning the operation of the National Recovery Act as it affects the issuance of employment certificates and the reorganization of the continuation schools.

The men from Harrisburg have been assigned to this meeting by Dr. James N. Rule, superintendent of public instruction.

OPENING DATE, NEWTOWN SCHOOLS, SEPTEMBER 5

Outside Pupils Entering High School Asked to Report
September 1st

BEGINNERS' TIME

NEWTOWN, Aug. 26—The opening date for Newtown borough public schools will be Tuesday, September 5th, with pupils being asked to assemble at 8.30 o'clock.

But one session will be held on the opening day, when enrollments will occur; lessons be assigned, and books distributed. The first regular classes will be held September 6th, although it is announced that all pupils are to report on the fifth.

It is asked that all pupils from the township districts, who will enroll in the ninth grade, meet the principal at the high school building on Friday, September 1st, when their choice of courses will be discussed. The hours when such calls may be made will be between nine a. m. and four p. m.

All children becoming six years of age before January 2, may enter first grade on September 5 or within the next two weeks. Children becoming six years of age between January 2 and June 15 may be admitted on January 2. All beginning children must have a birth certificate and vaccination certificate in order to be properly enrolled. Parents will save their children considerable confusion by having these matters attended to before September 5.

It is announced that a pupil who takes the Academic Course can prepare to enter any college by a careful choice of electives but should consult the principal each year concerning the choice of electives. In order to graduate from this course, a pupil must complete 4 units of work each year, including all required subjects. Only pupils who have excellent records will be permitted to carry 5 units of work in any year, and all conditions must be removed before graduation.

The commercial course prepares pupils to do efficient work as stenographers, typists or bookkeepers. Very few electives are offered, and all required work must be completed in order to graduate.

General course offers a wide choice of electives, but does not prepare directly for college or business. Graduation depends upon the completion of 16 units of work, including all required subjects.

Business Sessions of Legion Convention Conclude in Phila.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 26—(INS)—Business sessions concluded, the 15th annual convention of the Pennsylvania Department of the American Legion ended spectacularly here today with a four-hour parade.

Paul H. Griffith, of Uniontown, retiring commander, marshaled the huge column, which swung past the city hall and was reviewed by prominent city and state dignitaries at the official stand before historic Independence Hall.

Final speakers at the convention sessions continued the Legion's lashing offensive against the government's economy program and reduced veterans' benefits.

Winners in the four sections of the drum and bugle corps competitions last night and their scores out of a possible 100 points were:

Green Trojans, of Grensburg, Post 938, Class A, Bugle and Drum Corps, 93 points; Memorial Post 448, Duquesne, Class B, Bugle and Drum Corps, 85 1/2 points; George A. Amole Post, No. 47, Pottstown, drill team, 82 1/2 points; and Harrisburg Post No. 27, band contest, 96 1/2 points.

Delegates from Erie informed Otto Messner, of Lancaster, the newly-elected state leader, that a skeleton convention committee had already been formed to plan for next year's convention there.

All officers of the American Legion auxiliary were elected. They included: Mrs. Erma R. Beadle, Shamokin, president; Mrs. Joseph Slattery, St. Clair, eastern vice-president; Mrs. E. F. McIntire, Lock Haven, central vice president; Mrs. John F. Bair, Vandegrift, western vice president; Mrs. Charles W. Dressler, Swissvale, executive secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Arthur L. Kresge, Forty Fort, recording secretary, and Mrs. Mabel D. Stark, W. Pittston, chaplain.

If you're wise—you'll advertise.

ERRORS MAR THE GAME

(By T. M. Juno)

Errors marred the opening game of the championship series of the Lower Bucks County League last night on St. Ann's field as 1500 spectators saw the Hulmeville A. A. take over the Hibernians, the first half champions, 7-1.

The Hibs were weak in the infield. Every member of the cordon made at least one error. Thompson and Foster were chalked up with two each. The mis-plays aided the winners to push several runs across the plate which were unearned. Seven miscues were charged to the losing club.

On the other hand, the Hulmeville club gave Howard Black errorless support and with Black's fast ball and hooks breaking in fine style, the Hibernians were out of the game from the second frame on. Black allowed seven hits and these were well scattered. The losers had several opportunities to score but could not touch Black when a hit would have meant a run. Black fanned nine and did not issue a pass. The only tally from his delivery was the result of a triple by Sullivan.

"Eddie" Sullivan hurled the first seven innings and was found for all the winners' tallies, although it was not his fault. The errors by his mates kept the Hibs' moundman in hot water throughout. Sullivan fanned six and passed two. In the seventh and eighth, "Dizzy" Dean was on the hill and blanked the Hulmevilleites. "Denny" Hines saved Dean in the eighth by making a one-handed gloved catch of Rockhill's liner to rob the hitter of a possible double or triple.

The Hibernians took the lead in the second inning. With two outs, McGinley singled and scored when Sullivan blasted a triple to right field. Sullivan was stranded as Dougherty rolled out to Black.

Hulmeville tied it up in their part when Comly took two bases on Thompson's bad throw and scored when Black doubled.

THREE MEN UNDER BAIL IN ATTEMPTED SHOOTING

Affair Took Place On Trenton
Avenue, Early This Morning

ONE MAN WAS BEATEN

A shooting match in which no one was shot resulted in three men being held under bail for churl after a hearing this morning before Justice of Peace James Guy.

Two of the three held are already under bail in previous cases and one of the two is under bail on two charges.

Those held:

A. Indelicato, 25, 1016 Trenton avenue. Charged with assault and battery and aggravated assault and battery. Bail $500.

Nicholas Indelicato, 20, Chestnut street. Same charges as above. Bail $500.

Marco Mauro, 1017 Elm street. Charged with carrying a revolver without a license. Bail $500. Mauro, if found guilty faces a penalty of three years in jail.

Indelicato is already under $2,000 bail on two other charges one of which implicates him in the robbery of a salesman's automobile on Trenton avenue, December 20, 1932.

Mauro is under $500 bail charged with being implicated in the receipt of some of the stolen loot from the automobile.

Mauro had the Indelicatos arrested because he alleges they attacked him early this morning on Trenton avenue. He showed evidence of having been beaten and severely pummeled.

The Indelicatos had Mauro arrested because they allege he attempted to shoot them, firing twice on Trenton avenue.

Mauro says he found the Indelicatos beating Leo Lasparella, an aged man. Indelicatos claim they were trying to get Lasparella home and that Mauro was looking for an argument.

Bristol Man Hears Shots;
One is Killed, One Injured

Arthur Brooks, Wilson avenue, Bristol, heard the shots this morning which snuffed out the life of one and injured another in Frankford. Brooks was motoring from his employment in Philadelphia to his home here when his attention was attracted by the crack of a pistol.

The shots had been fired by Robert Rodenhaver, 58, Frankford, who seriously wounded his 21-year old daughter, Irene, and then ended his own life as his wife telephoned police. Rodenhaver is believed to have been mentally deranged as a result of a heat prostration several months ago.

Rodenhaver poured six bullets into his daughter's body as the climax to an argument over her boy-friend.

Brushing past his terror-stricken wife, he ran to the bathroom re-loaded the pistol and sent a bullet through his brain.

The girl was not expected to live.

CAPTAINS TO MEET

EXPECT A LARGE ENROLLMENT AT BENSALEM SCHOOLS

Sessions to Commence September 7th; May Erase
Conditions on 6th

BUILDINGS RENOVATED

Only Two Changes Made In Teaching Staff; Faculty
Total One Less

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Aug. 26—The public schools of Bensalem Township will open for the beginning of the Fall term on September 7th. On the morning of the day previous, September 6, at nine o'clock (D. S. T.), examinations will be offered to those students of the high school who desire to erase certain conditions. These examinations will be offered only to those individuals who have made an honest effort through summer school, private tutor, or otherwise, to prepare for these examinations.

All of the school buildings of the township have been, or are being completely renovated for the opening of school. Minor improvements have been made to all buildings. The Trevoise school has received a new coat of paint, and considerable painting was done in connection with the Eddington building.

A heavy enrollment is expected in grades and junior-senior high school. On September 7th, the first school day, all beginners will be enrolled except those who have already enrolled, and those who will enroll previous to the first day of the term. All new pupils, pupils who have moved into the district since the close of last term, should present themselves for enrollment previous to the opening of school, it is announced. This may be done by going to the superintendent's office in the high school building during business hours on any day between this date and the opening of school. New pupils will be expected, as will also beginners, to present a birth certificate as an evidence of age, and also a certificate of successful vaccination. It is also necessary for new pupils to present transfer cards from the school last attended.

All pupils of the township will be permitted to return to their homes at the end of the morning session, September 7th. September 8th will be the first two-session day. Cafeteria service will begin then.

The first faculty meeting for the 1933-1934 term will convene at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon, September 6th.

The faculty of the Andalusia, Edgington, Penn Valley, and Trevoise schools will remain the same as last year. In the Cornwells grade school, Miss Clara A. Withers, Ephrata, a graduate of Millersville State Teachers College, B. S. degree, will succeed Miss Verna M. Giles, resigned. This is the only change in the faculty of the Cornwells grade school.

In the Bensalem Township Junior-Senior high school, Miss Mary E. Rothenberger, Lime Kiln, a graduate of Ursinus College, B. S. degree, will succeed Earl Dissinger, resigned.

The position held by Miss Katharine B. Krauser will not be filled. There will, therefore, be one teacher less in the high school. Some of the work of physical education among the girls will be in Miss Rothenberger's charge in addition to her other teaching duties.

It is announced that changes are to be made in transportation of pupils. Some students living near the schools will be required to walk. This change is due to increase in the number of scholars who live at a distance from the schools.

The superintendent, S. K. Faust, is very anxious to have all freshmen go to the high school office previous to the opening of the school term for the purpose of arranging their roster. Many Freshmen will need to be advised and assisted in completing their roster, it is stated. Such advice and assistance may best be rendered to new entrants to the high school individually and in advance of the opening date. The high school office will be open for such service on each day between this date and the opening of school.

WILL IT BE MILD?

Uncle Sam has been doing some long-distance weather reading and predicts a mild winter for the country as a whole, meaning by mild some such weather as the country has been experiencing for several years.

This prophecy, welcomed by all but the fuel dealers and snow shovel makers, is based on past experience. The Federal meteorologist who made it may have guessed wrong but at least his forecast is not without foundation.

Records show that the weather moves in cycles of a few cold years between a succession of warm years. In the past a change from the severe to the mild and vice versa has come gradually so it reasonably is expected there will be more moderation in winter weather this year. The present upward trend in temperature began after the hard winter of 1918, since when abnormal weather has been dominant. That the cycle is not preparing to change is evident from the fact that every month this year except March has brought temperatures above the 50-year mean.

No guarantee goes with the government oracle, so it is too soon for the wood-choppers, coal industry and snow interests to throw in the sponge, nor is there occasion for jubilation among the jobless and those who are still wondering where the money for the winter's supply of fuel and fur coats is coming from. There is no chance of the tropics moving into the northern tier of states and no greater probability of the Arctic circle encompassing the winter playgrounds of Florida and California.

EXAMPLE

There is a class of educators whose threatened disappearance is apparently not so imminent as popular report would make it. They are the elder children in the family who, consciously or otherwise, help to bring up the younger ones.

Although the average American family has but four members, the third and fourth children not only exist in large numbers but as an influence.

Unwittingly the elder child may be an influence for harm, as when he induces nervousness in the younger children by the effort to keep up. He may be and is an influence for good as when he supplies the companionship which the younger child craves and which a busy mother cannot always supply.

As the elder child is bent so, in most cases, will the younger child be inclined. The first-born is one of the most potent of educators because he teaches by force of example. An elder child with a tendency for bores will establish a tradition of seriousness in the family. An elder child who sees no purpose in study will as a rule play mischief with the school reports of younger brothers and sisters. The first-born is the natural-born leader in the family's younger set.

The social problem seems, therefore, to be a double one: First to bring up well the eldest child and second to supply him or her with younger brothers and sisters to bring up.

Yesterday many were worrying about how long they would hold their jobs. Today they are worrying about how soon they will get a raise.

Revenue Cruiser Has Patrolled 43,111 Miles

In the two years it has been patrolling the Delaware and Schuylkill Rivers, the State Revenue cruiser covered approximately 43,111 miles. Its crew of four men inspected 1,567 barges. The source and destination of 310,472,606 gallons of gasoline were checked.

The figures are from the formal report of Captain William J. Ruch of Troop E, State Highway Patrol, under whose command the river patrol operates.

against gasoline bootleggers. Screened by statistics, however, is a story of service rendered outside the line of duty. Here are a few incidents:

While making a regular patrol on the Schuylkill River one night last spring, the crew saw a barge adrift. It was making an estimated speed of eight knots an hour. Seven men were aboard. The cruiser signalled it would stand by. Lines were tossed to the barge. Its speed and weight, with 160,000 gallons of gasoline aboard, were too much for the cruiser to cope with. The lines parted.

The barge continued its wild career down stream. The cruiser continued in pursuit. At one point it was able to take off one man. The spectacular chase ended when the barge went aground on a mud bar. The crew of the cruiser assisted in taking lines ashore and removed the men to safety.

On another occasion while patrolling the Delaware River, the revenue men sighted a disabled pleasure cruiser adrift. Several passengers were aboard. A line was passed to the craft and it was towed to safety. Other services rendered outside the line of duty included the finding and return of stolen motor boats, the chase and capture of harbor thieves, and assisting the Philadelphia harbor police in the recovery of victims of drowning.

The cruiser is on duty 24 hours every day in the week. It went into service July 16, 1931.

River Receding; Three-Inch Drop Since Last Night

floor, Farrell decided that it was time to leave.

The bridge connecting the Island from North Delmor Avenue was washed away by the water and many gardens along the waterfront were flooded.

Morris Island, where there is an athletic field, was under several feet of water.

The flood waters tore through a dike at the Starky Farms, below Morrisville, just before noon yesterday, and there was danger of the waters leaping over retaining walls and inundating much of their truck land.

Scores of workmen were pressed into service to repair the break and strengthen the other walls.

YARDLEY, Aug. 26.—Much excitement has been aroused in this vicinity due to the rapid rise of the Delaware River.

Thursday night at eight o'clock all river front residents, living in bungalows from Afton Avenue to Maple Avenue, were urged to leave their homes, due to the swift rising of the river and the backing-up of the water in adjoining streams. All cars were moved to high ground on Afton Avenue, long before midnight.

Many canoes, boats, floats, platforms, walks, etc., safely fastened by cable, to trees and poles were among the missing at daybreak, due to the large trees and lumber floating from above, tearing the wires loose.

Members of the Eagle Neckband Corp. worked all day yesterday to prevent the influx of the water into their factory along the riverfront. The water has been held back by the use of sand-bags, and heavy forms. Due to the fine texture of the materials used much damage will be done if the water forces its way through the barriers.

A number of homes are completely surrounded by water, making entrance only possible by boat. Many families have abandoned the first floor, moving all their possessions to the second story.

SEATTLE, Wash.—(INS)—The state supreme court's decision that money found on a robber fleeing the scene of a crime must be returned to him was held "absurd" here by Superior Judge Robert M. Jones, who refused to quash a garnishment against A. R. Gaffney for $485 found on him after his arrest for a bank robbery.

To Play Five Games Of Bocci Here Tomorrow

Bristol's National League Bocci Club will play a five game series with Circulo-Ricativo Club, Philadelphia, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 on the Sons of Italy grounds, Wood street.

The Philadelphians are one of the strongest teams in the National League and will come to Bristol with their best line-up. The locals, who are nobody's set-up, will give the visitors a battle.

EDGELEY AND TULLYTOWN WILL OPEN SERIES

Tomorrow afternoon on the Edgely field, Edgely A. C., of the Bristol Twilight League, will open their annual three-game series with the Tullytown A. A. These clubs have been rivals for years and always close their season with a series.

"Pete" Pierce will do the hurling for the Edgely team with Hibbs behind the plate. The remainder of the lineup will be the same as that which hit the nine to the second place position in the Twilight League.

The game will begin at 2:30 o'clock.

Emilie A. A. will seek its eleventh straight victory tomorrow afternoon on the Edgely field when the nine meets the Chew Cardinals, of Philadelphia. This is the third time that the teams have been matched. Three other frays were called because of rain.

"The" Watson will do the twirling for the Emilieites and will go after his seventh straight win. His battery mate will most likely be "Dutch" Afflerbach.

The game will begin at 2:30 o'clock.

Hulmeville Victor In First of Series

The ultimate winners put the game on ice by scoring three in the third. Rockhill opened by drawing a pass. He was sacrificed to second by Leigh. Dougherty made a nice throw which would have retired Bilger but Foster dropped the ball for an error. Watson singled to right, scoring Rockhill. Dougherty caught Comly's high fly. Black was passed to fill the sacks. Bruce drove in two runs with a sounding single to right. Hemp was thrown out by Thompson.

Two runs were added to Hulmeville's total in the next inning. Haefner had struck out when Rockhill singled to short right. Leigh fanned. Rockhill stole second and scored on Bilger's single past Dougherty. Bilger stole second and scored when Watson dropped a hit in right. Comly's best was a fly to left which McGinley got under.

In the sixth, Rockhill got three bases on Dugan's error in right and scored on Roe's error of Leigh's grounder.

Black with a double and single led the Hulmeville batsmen while Watson also had two blows, Roe and Dougherty had two safe bids each for the Hibernians.

The second game of the series will be played at Hulmeville on next Tuesday night.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Leni was still for so long that Cavanaugh began to wonder if she were asleep.

"Are you awake?"
"Yes, darling."
"Happy?"

Her face moved closer to his own, her breath on his cheek was like the fragrance of a flower.
"So happy I can't express it," she murmured. "Something is happening to us, lucky something that I can hardly believe is true. Do you think it possible—is there such a thing as being born again? On this earth?"

"Certainly I believe it," Lucky assured her tenderly. "It's happened to me already."

At that instant the telephone rang with a wild clamor.

"And there's Gabriel blowing his horn," he added with a grin. "Do you want to answer it?"

Leni reached out a smooth, lazy arm and picked up the phone. A man's voice, sulled and rusty reached her small ear.

"Listen, lady—and get what I'm saying straight. I want to talk to Lucky Cavanaugh. If you know where he is tell him to get in touch with me—"

"Who is this, please?"

"Just tell him Slug wants to speak to him!"

"Slug?"

"That's right."

Cavanaugh reached across and took the voice out of her hand.

Cavanaugh put his hand over the transmitter and spoke to Leni.

"Ask him to repeat the name and hand it back to me so I can hear his voice."

"Who is this again, please?" inquired Leni softly.

The instrument clanged hands and Cavanaugh, listening closely, heard the unmistakable voice of Slug coming from its obscure source.

"Just tell Mr. Cavanaugh to get in touch with Slug as soon as possible. Slug—got that?"

"Hello there, Slug!" said Cavanaugh heartily. "What's the word?"

Leni completely relaxed, watched Cavanaugh whose face became an iron mask as he listened to what Slug was saying. He rested on one elbow and the visible tension in his whole straight figure showed that he was hearing something that was deeply important.

The idyllic pleasure in which Leni had been dreaming began to vanish. For a little while they had crested themselves around with the wall of forgetfulness against the outside world—a world so fragile that it had been shattered by the ringing of a telephone. It was, so it seemed, impossible to hide away from life.

There was no clue toward what Cavanaugh was hearing in his half of the conversation.

"Yes—I see... Yes... I understand. Okay."

He put up the instrument and swung himself to a sitting posture on the edge of the bed.

"What is it?" she asked, reaching up and running her fingers through his thick hair which was always faintly scented with cigarettes and shampoo.

"Nothing important," he said, noncommittally.

Leni knew this was not true, but she said nothing.

Nothing, really. Slug wants to see you, and talk over something."

Cavanaugh, his thoughts also where, gave Leni a sideways smile. He was thinking entirely of what Slug had said.

"Yes—I believe he's right," he answered. He did not sound regretful, but sure. "We've got to be all right—but a lot has got to be done first."

Leni got up. She jumped him a comb and brush for his hair. He had long been without sleep and she fancied his eyes looked tired.

She wanted to do many tender things for him, but he was in a hurry to be gone.

She stood in front of him, achingly at the thought of letting him go. Her hands were outstretched and he took hold of them, but the mood of romance had evaporated. There was a new look in his eyes—hard, nervous, tense. He drew her to him and kissed her.

When shall I see you again, thought Leni and her eyes became so misted that he was but a wavering outline through her tears.

"You'll hear from me soon," he said. "I'd better not phone. Mulrooney may tap the wire. This house is going to be watched. But I'll find a way."

So intent was he upon what was in his mind that he did not even notice her eyes were wet. It was more difficult than she had expected to let him go. Her arms, with the age-old movement of woman-kind, began to cling to him.

"Can't we both go away off together?" Leni pleaded. "We can get a ship to any part of the world."

"Got to settle up here first," answered Cavanaugh quickly.

"Then settle up as soon as possible," said Leni with her moist lips. "Make it soon—soon! I've brought you so much bad luck—so much trouble—but I'll make it all up to you. I swear I will, darling. We'll leave Hollywood—we'll go far away and live and live and live! Protect yourself, darling—don't let anything more happen! Surely, there must be a way to finish this terrible business up in a peaceable manner."

Cavanaugh kissed her again.

"Don't worry, sweetheart. We'll soon be free."

Leni knew he was going out on a mission of inevitable danger. The least she could do was to let him go with a smile.

"Make it sooner than soon!" she said as she shut the door behind him.

As Cavanaugh went down the stairs he was conscious of a suppleness of his own body. He was short of sleep, under a terrific strain—yet he had touched a reserve supply of nervous force. The second wind. In his breast, was a spiraling sensation of excitement, of tingling audacity.

The fact that Leni was behind him—waiting—constituted an electric force running through all his movements.

At the door he hesitated. The place might be watched. That was a risk that had to be met.

This feeling, however, was groundless. Despite all efficient intentions, the police are sometimes dilatory.

Cavanaugh glanced at his watch. Five minutes had elapsed since he had ceased talking to Slug. Sufficient time for the man to be here. He opened the door and boldly walked down to the curb.

In Hollywood, everyone is accustomed to the strangest costumes. Bandits and cowboys and Foreign Legionnaires come and go, attracting no attention except from the visitors. Evening clothes are quite commonplace along the boulevard at noon. Wild automoble chases, preceded by police escorts and sirens, career through the streets, cameras on trucks in close pursuit.

All in all, it is perhaps the most colorful and surprising city on earth. These startling characters in costumes are movie extras. Hundreds of them are employed daily.

As a rule they congregate in the vicinity of the studios where they are working, but often they roam the entire city in childish pleasure with their commonplace identity concealed beneath their glamorous costumes.

It was for this reason that Slug, sitting in a battered roadster and garbed in a vivid plaid shirt with a red handkerchief around his neck and a flapping felt hat on his head, attracted no attention whatever. This costume was complicated by a set of bushy black whiskers glued to Slug's somewhat, vernal countenance. He wore tight gray trousers, black boots and a revolver and cartridge belt. Also, he smoked a pipe.

Even the children in the street knew what he was and did not bother to look.

He was a minor of '49—one of the four or five hundred, similar extras working in one of those perennial epics of frontier life. . . .

It may be thought strange—yet it is not—that a man of Slug's temperament and profession should be garbed as a movie extra. The truth was that he worked occasionally in the pictures, as do many of his ilk.

At the moment, however, he was not so employed. The clothes he wore were probably the property of some producing company, as was a similar outfit on the floor of the car.

A man of any resourcefulness at all, in Hollywood, never has trouble about a costume.

Perhaps it was the exploit of blowing a movie theater safe by a gang dressed as ushers that opened up to Slug the great possibilities of disguise.

The important ingredient in the whole matter was his unwavering admiration for Lucky Cavanaugh. It was admiration plus loyalty.

Cavanaugh—with his careless good-will—had founded this feeling in Tampico, "Here's enough to take care of the hospital bill and buy a ticket home," he had said. Slug promised to pay him back, and probably meant it. Now, at any rate, he was parked in front of Leni Lunska's home, risking his own freedom to help a pal.

"They was broadcasting your escape on the police radio and I picked it up," said Slug as Cavanaugh climbed into the car. The principal pastime in Hollywood is gossip; the second, listening to the police broadcast which all radios are tuned to receive. "Better take off that Panama and put on this sombrero."

Cavanaugh without the slightest hesitation, put on the sombrero.

"If you'll take off your coat and tie this bandanna around your neck—" suggested Slug.

"FRILLY" AROUND THE NECK NEW EDICT FOR MILADY FROM PARIS

By Alice Langeller
(N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—(INS)—Paris says to be fluffy and frilly about the neck this fall. There are all sorts of frilly sheer cotton effects and crisp silks which adapt themselves to fall styling in be-ruffled, tied-on collars. Sheer silks in white and pastels, mouselines, chiffons and georgettes are used for fuzzy neck effects and cuffs accentuate.

Drapery, too, will soften the higher necklines promised for autumn wear. Squares and angles and points are suggested by softly-folded drapes. They swirl and wrap about, working up to a higher collar-line which takes the sting of severity from the tailored collar which inclines toward height.

Bias fabrics swathed to shape the neck and frame the chin overcome many objections and make a new form of flattering neckline.

Yokes will probably remain through the winter. Some are made with a detached point which buttons down against a point or back of the bodice. A single large artificial flower is posed at the centre-front of day and evening dresses.

NEW FALL EVENING DRESSES DESIGNED FOR DOUBLE DUTY

By Alice Langeller
(N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—The newest evening dresses coming out for fall and winter wear are especially made to do double duty. The evening gown that added a little jacket has long been with us. But now that dress bodices are much flatter and fussier, the tailored type of jacket occupies a dubious position and has really become a tall-tale article of the two-way costume.

So now the dressmakers are not making it so tailored, having it follow soft lines that can either be bloused or boxed. So closely do they follow dress effects that some are even buttoned at the neck. Sometimes there is a high-necked or boat-shaped casquin short-sleeved of course, but suitable for informal wear as contrasted with the low-cut formal gown beneath. Gimpes with elaborate sleeves and high necks are clever, particularly when the formal frock that is being transformed temporarily is a black one.

Peggy Morris uses gray transparent velvet for her two-way gown, an ideal dinner cum-evening affair with removable sleeves and scarf.

The tunic-dress, an outgrowth of the jumper theme which has suddenly leaped back into prominence, is very adaptable to this two-way traffic. A very smart one seen at Miller Souers is of red crepe that buttons down over a black skirt.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

WITH August nearly over, the harvest of fruits and vegetables is at its height. Most vegetables are both plentiful and low in price. All over the country excellent western peas are available. Peas are especially good with poultry, lamb and with fish, all of which are good choices at the present time.

The root vegetables, green and wax beans and summer squash are all abundant and low in price. It is the height of the green corn season and the time to enjoy corn-on-the-cob. Tomatoes are ripe, sweet and juicy—at their best either raw or cooked. They are delicious stuffed with a macaroni and cheese mixture.

Peaches and cantaloupes are plentiful and of excellent quality. Bartlett pears are delicious eaten out-of-hand or in salads. Nectarines are in market but their season is brief.

Here are menus from the Quaker Maid Kitchen:

Low Cost Dinner
Pork Chops	Macaroni with Cheese
Buttered Onions	Bread and Butter
Bartlett Pears	Milk
Tea or Coffee
Medium Cost Dinner
Roast Pork	Baked Sweet Potatoes
Green Peas	Apple Sauce
Bread and Butter	Fruit Cup
Milk
Very Special Dinner
Cantaloupe	Chicken Fricassee
Candied Sweet Potatoes	Sweet Corn
Tomato Salad	Salad Dressing
Rolls	Butter
Spanish Cream
Coffee (hot or iced)	Milk
